Excerpt: . . . 11 The results in 2004 certainly demonstrate the importance and need for continuing and adequately funding the state-side LWCF: 572 local and state park and recreation areas were enhanced with grants, and 420 of the sites benefited from entirely new recreational facilities; 87 new parks and recreation areas were created, including picnic areas, fitness trails, playing fields to accommodate youth participation in baseball, basketball, football and soccer; 645 locations helped by LWCF encouraged active participation to strengthen the health and vitality of Americans. The Presidents budget request also woefully under-funds the Federal acquisition program for our national wildlife refuges, parks, forests, and monuments. The Natural Resources Inventory estimates 2. 2 million acres are lost to development each year; once lost, these lands can never be recovered. We must not lose our significant national historical and cultural heritage. When Congress created the Land and...
