Mr. Frankel was born at Hildesheim, Hanover, Germany, August 26, 1831; was educated under the eminent Dr. Karl Karmarsch, at the Polytechnic School in the city of Hanover; came to the United States in 1850, and died in Philadelphia, April 28, 1881. He was a learned, an industrious, and an amiable man, thoroughly versed in several languages, and a good technical scholar, who was well acquainted with the literature of this special branch of knowledge. It need hardly be said that such a man was of incalculable value to an industrial publishing house. He had done other and good work for us, was thoroughly appreciated by us, as well personally as professionally, and we had looked forward with satisfaction to his future usefulness to us. Our relations were so far agreeable to him that they seemed to infuse into him new life, energy, and hope, when, unhappily, he was suddenly stricken by the disease which in a few days brought to an end his useful career. To us his loss is very great; to his family it is indeed overwhelming and irreparable. It affords us a melancholy satisfaction to pay this slight tribute to his worth. The volume now presented to American readers, is upon a class of industries which has been surrounded...
