Excerpt: .of these articles ought not to be overlooked. Experiments in these branches of industry are, however, beyond the means and the numbers, of the colonists at present, but I venture to anticipate that the estimation of the colony in the eyes of the public will be gradually enhanced AUSTHALIA. hanced the longer this peculiarity, in its natural qualifications, is considered and examined. Such being the not unreasonable prospects of the settlement, it is easy to point out those measures which will tend to their realization. Of these, the principal will be a gradual influx of people to participate in the enterprises to which the natural qualiBcations of the territory are shown to be suited. This influx must, however, arise out of private adventure, stimulated by success, and principally sustained by the profits made on these leading pursuits. The Government cannot aid effectually in hastening the progress of the settlement in these branches of industry, but it may protect the settler from injury, by effective public establishments, until the community be rich enough to provide for its own protection. This the settlement may be fairly expected to accomplish in a few years, if the aid hitherto given, and still required, be not too soon withdrawn. Western Australia. (signed) James Stirling, Governor.--No. 2.--REGULATIONS relative to Town and Suburban Allotments in WtUern Australia. General Conditions. 1. Persons receiving land or building lots within the settlement are not at liberty to transfer the same to any other individual,...
