

Contemporary Housing

By Segantini, Maria Alessandra.

Skira. 1 Flexi-binding(s), 2008. soft. Book Condition: New. Illustrated with 180 color photos and renderings, as well as 40 black and white photos and additional drawings and plans, this book considers the dwelling as both a refuge in a world that is changing rapidly and also as an experimental lab for exploring new ways of experiencing "home." Seven essays discuss the function of home as the threshold between private and collective space; housing density; sustainable construction; flexibility of form; the relationship of the home to its environment; the "customization" of standard housing; and the re-purposing of non-residential structures as new forms of housing. Each is followed by a series of profiles exploring specific examples of contemporary housing. 335.
